

Reimagine Aging in Place

Date: August 20, 2024

No one likes to move. Imagine that once you move into a Senior Living community, you never have to move again – not even apartments. Aging in place normally means that you stay home, maintaining your independence but utilizing family and friends when you need help. However, it's proven that seniors are healthier and happier when they live at a senior living community rather than staying home.

At Edencrest, we are redefining senior living by rolling out an aging in place model for our residents. What does this look like? Lots of people move in as an Independent Living resident, and usually once more care is needed, they will move into an Assisted Living apartment in a different part of the community. With our licensure, we are able to simply add your services to your apartment – without moving you to a different part of the community.

Living an Edencrest you can get the care you need, amenities you want, and pick out the perfect apartment without any fear of having to move again. Come see our community and what is awaiting you!
